Product Description

Organic Matter Removal Wooden Raw Powdered Activated Carbon for Wastewater Treatment

This powdered activated carbon is made from high-quality wooden raw materials, which undergo a series of processing steps to develop its porous structure and high adsorption capacity. The wooden source gives it certain advantages, such as being environmentally friendly and renewable.

The activated carbon's fine powder form allows for a large surface area to come into contact with the wastewater, enhancing its adsorption efficiency. It can adsorb a wide range of organic compounds, including dyes, pesticides, pharmaceuticals, and other pollutants.

When added to wastewater, the powdered activated carbon attracts and binds the organic matter, removing it from the water. This helps to improve the water quality by reducing the concentration of harmful organic substances and making the treated water more suitable for discharge or reuse.
